Synopsis

The timeline and pathway to achieving net zero in the maritime sector is being widely debated by industry and government, including discussions around the appropriate technologies, fuels, and government policies.

Please join us for this webinar where we will have expert speakers from across Asia and Europe discussing the challenges and opportunities associated with achieving 'net zero' emissions in the maritime sector. They will also be reflecting on the outcomes of COP26, the United Nations Climate Change Conference currently taking place in Glasgow, and its implications for the maritime and shipping sector going forward.

Specifically, the event will address the following questions:

- What are the leading technologies and fuels that will enable decarbonization in the maritime sector, what are their strengths, and what are the barriers to their widespread deployment?
- What are the challenges to implementation in the real world keeping in mind the transitional costs involved?
- What is the role of governments, regulatory authorities, and other international organizations and agencies in achieving 'net zero'?
- What are the best ways to incentivize innovation and investment in relevant technologies and fuels to support decarbonization in the maritime sector?
- What are the priorities for regulation and enforcement?
